Aladdin and His Magic Lamp

Long, long ago there was a wicked magician, named Samsan. He knew that there was a magic lamp in a cave. He wanted to have it but he was plump and could not enter it by himself. So, he decided to take the help of a small boy.

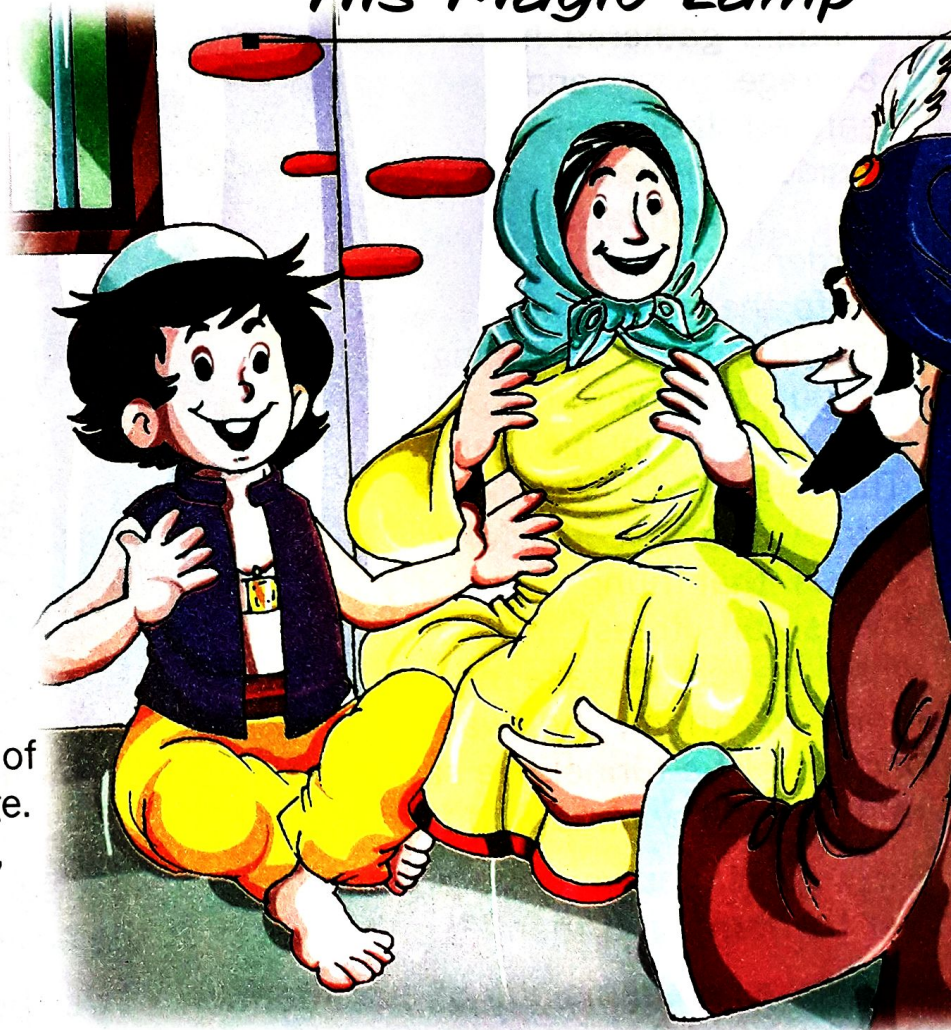

As he ventured into the nearby village, he spotted a slim boy who was being defeated in the game of marbles. He knew by his magic that he was Aladdin, the son of widowed woman of the village. He walked up to him and said, "You are Aladdin, aren't you?"

"Yes, I'm," said Aladdin.

"I'm the friend of your deceased father," said Samsan. Now Samsan would often visit Aladdin and his widowed mother and bring them gifts; thus he befriended them.

A few days later, Samsan brought Aladdin to the mouth of the cave and said, "If you do me a small favour, I'll make you the richest man in the land.

Buried underground in a wonderful garden, the way to which goes through this cave. You'll find the most precious gems stacked there and to your delight, you can keep them all for yourself and become a rich man," said the magician. "What I want for me is the burning lamp at the altar in one of the corners of the garden. Just put it off and bring it to me."

Aladdin gathered his courage and entered the cave. Inside it, he found a wonderful garden. He walked up to the altar where a bronze lamp was burning. He put it out with his palm and took it in his hand. Then he filled his pocket with the colourful stones that hung from the small trees. And when he could take no more of them, he walked back into the tunnel. He saw the magician standing at the mouth of the cave. He said, "Hold my hand and take me out"

"Very good, you've done a great job indeed", said the magician. "Just pass me over the lamp and then I'll pull you out of the cave".

Aladdin grew suspicious of his intention. "First pull me out of here", demanded he. It enraged Samsan, He cried, "Lamp first!"

Aladdin refused to obey him. The enraged magician went away but before that he closed the mouth of the tunnel with a heavy boulder.

Poor Aladdin! The boulder was too heavy for him to push. He came back to the garden. He helped himself with luscious fruits and fountain water. Then he walked here and there. He found a ring. He just rubbed it on the ground. With a flash, a goblin appeared. Aladdin was terrified for a moment. The goblin declared, 'Master, I'm at your service. Order, what I should do for you. Every wish of yours is an order to me.'

Aladdin stuttered, "C-can you g-get me out of here?"

"Of course," said the goblin and there was a flash and Aladdin found himself outside the cave. He ran towards his cottage. He found his mother at the door with extended arms, eager to gather him in her embrace. He showed his mother his prized possessions-the precious stones, the ring and the rusty bronze lamp.

"Fine, keep everything in the cupboard while I cook for you," said his mother,

"You need not work anymore," said Aladdin rubbing the ring on the floor. Soon the goblin fetched them the most delicious goodies that they had ever imagined or seen.

Then they got all types of articles they needed—clothes, utensils, food articles, shoes, caps, pieces of furniture and all that they thought they needed.

"What should we do of this dirty lamp? asked 'Aladdin' I think I should scrub it shine and sell it in the market", said his mother.

Aladdin knew nothing about the lamp, so he said, "As you wish." His mother sat down and scrubbed the lamp with ash and lo! The unimaginable happened. Smoke started to emit from the lamp. It filled the room and soon a giant genie appeared. The genie thundered, I'm at your disposal, Master. I'm the mightiest of all the genies, goblins and devils. Nothing is beyond my powers."

His mother was terrified, but Aladdin reassured her. And he demanded of the genie, "I want a castle, the one which is more splendid than that of the sultan of the sultanate and all that goes with it—servants, guards, horses, elephants, camels, splendid clothes, curtains and hangings. Genie said “why not?”

And all his wishes were accomplished in no time. Now dressed in the most magnificent robes with golden broaches and diamond buttons, Aladdin looked richer than the richest prince in the world.

One day Aladdin was taking a walk in the market, when the princess' Palanquin passed before him. The princess caught his fancy. He fell in love with her at first sight.

As he returned home, he said to his mother, “Mother, I've found the girl that would make a suitable bride.”

“Who's she? enquired his mother.

“She is Princess Badoura of this sultanate,” informed Aladdin.

His mother agreed to go to the palace with the proposal. Along with her, she took a large entourage of thirty camels, all laden with most magnificent ornaments studded with jewels and precious stones. She was granted audience with the sultan in no time.

Presenting the gifts, his mother said in all humility, “My son, Aladdin wants to marry the princess and I bring you this proposal.”

The sultan was amazed at the most beautiful presents he received. But he wanted a bridegroom for his daughter who was the richest and bravest so he said, "I'd agree to your proposal provided your son can defeat the Afghans in a war."

Alladin's mother agreed. The very same day, Aladdin ordered his genie to destroy and trample the Afghan forces. By the evening the same day, the Afghan forces were utterly defeated.

So the sultan consented and their marriage was solemnised soon after. After the qazi proclaimed them man and wife. A sumptuous feast followed. All noble men in the land and beyond attended it. Thus, Aladdin and Princess Badoura began their happy married life.

Listen to the poem as your teacher reads it out to you :

HEAVENLY GRASS

My feet took a walk in heavenly grass,
 All day while the sky shone clear as glass. My feet took a walk in heavenly grass, All night while the lonesome stars rolled past. Then my feet come down to walk on earth, And my mother cried when she give me birth. Now my feet walk far and my feet walk fast,
 But they still got an itch for heavenly grass, But they still got an itch for heavenly grass.

When we commit a mistake or hurt someone, we use these words to apologise : I'm sorry, I'm so sorry forgive me, I apologise, etc. But how do you reply when you accept someone's apology. You can say, 'don't worry, that's ok, that's all right, it doesn't matter, etc For example :

- Khushboo : ∴ I'm sorry. I'm late today.
 Sonam : Don't worry. It happens some times.
 Ajay : So sorry. I've forgotten to bring your notebook.
 Ansh : It doesn't matter. Bring it tomorrow.
